Communicating With Your Team

Meet with friends, relatives, service/care providers or others in the circle of support to let them know about your plans. There may be different messages for different people:

- Expected roles
- Expected interactions
- □ Special instructions for wills, estates
- Authorities granted, e.g through conservatorship
- Familiarity with plans, documents, tools

Consider what materials to share with friends, family members, team members, service providers (such as Imagine) to help transitions go smoothly.

People Resources

- Attorneys some will identify specifically as special needs attorneys
- Financial Planners ask if they are certified for special needs
- Attorneys ask about their history/experience with special needs individuals
- Tax Accountants ask if they have worked with Special Needs Trusts
- Fiduciaries may be individuals or organizations some will identify specifically as special needs fiduciaries.
- Circle of Support

Online Resources

These resources can be useful for finding the above listed professionals, and may also offer training and other resources for parents/conservators to learn.

- Parents Helping Parents has transition fairs, person-centered training, and other resources for parents.
- Protected Tomorrows offers Parent University training as well as a directory of expert advisors for families of individuals with special needs.
- Special Needs Answers has a searchable listing of special needs planning professionals (attorneys, financial planners and trust officers) for service and advice .

Imagine Resources

Periodically, Imagine brings together families and friends so that connections can be made. These are perfect times for parents/conservators to ask others about their experiences and knowledge in any of the areas mentioned.

Imagine SLS Parents/Conservators Life Planning Pamphlet

Congratulations! You care about an adult served by Imagine with Supported Living Services. Imagine has an ongoing promise to be there for each person they serve throughout their lifetime.

There is a real possibility that their lifetime in SLS will be longer than yours. A good life plan provides guidance to future friends, family and caregivers as they support your loved one's continued social, vocational, medical, spiritual and financial development.

This pamphlet is intended to help you prepare for this future - providing continuity and support. The responsibility for this planning resides with you, the parent or conservator. Since this planning affects your loved one, please include them to the maximum extent possible.
